in an oriental or western monolithic state. Years of build-up would be required to remedy this vulnerability. Therefore Malenkov and his political inner group are highly unlikely to take any steps in the near future intentionally leading to a major war such as would follow an attack on Western Europe or on the US unless the US and Western Europe should become so weak or disunited as to offer the USSR a target of quick, easy conquest in Western Europe.

5. My advice would be to meet, confer and discuss with the Soviets at every opportunity, but do not trust their motives, intentions or anything they say; at the same time keeping the US and Western Europe as strong as possible. The Soviets understand only power.
